

Home interior design: What will be trending in 2022?

Reinventing your home for the year ahead? Singapore design experts weigh in on what's hot this year.

FOCUS ON MULTIFUNCTIONAL SPACES

With social gathering limits still in place, aside from having a home office or study room, Shermaine Ong, principal designer at Mosh Interior, believes that more homeowners will desire an entertainment room or area. "For example, entertainment rooms with KTV, a game room or a home movie theatre with projection screen. A gym room or corner is another additional trend that we are seeing as well," said Ong.

INCORPORATING A SENSE OF HOLIDAY

While travel is slowly making a return, packing our bags and hopping onto a flight overseas is no longer a simple or straightforward affair. Whether in big or small ways, homeowners will desire to weave reminiscences of their time abroad into their homes.

Elements such as wainscoting panels will be popular. (Photo: Mosh Interior)

Ong of Mosh Interior has seen increasing demand for interior styles such as Hamptons-inspired, Parisian chic and mid-century modern. "All these have similar characteristics, for example, herringbone timber flooring, French doors, wainscoting panels, a white base paired with earthy tones such as walnut wood and more," Ong said.

"Personally, I feel that travel restrictions have inspired clients to desire a home that allows them to feel like they are overseas. It also makes them feel more relaxed after a long day or work, whether at home or in the office."

The Parisian style can help to give your home an overseas feel. (Photo: Mosh Interior)

Source: CNA/st/ds

by MELISSA STEWART

08 Jan 2022 06:22AM
(Updated: 08 Jan 2022 06:22AM)